

NEW YORK POST

January 18, 2020

Circulation: 414,245

Out&About 27

▲ OUT OF THIS WORLD

We are not alone: Other worlds share our solar system, and scientists continue to learn more about them. Starting Tuesday, you can share their journey in "Worlds Beyond Earth," the new space show — and the first to be narrated by Oscar winner Lupita Nyong'o. And no, that's not CGI you'll see, but actual visuals from many unmanned missions whirling around the solar system. On weekends, the 25-minute show will screen every half hour from 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Hayden Planetarium. Opens Tuesday, $28 adults, $16.50 children (Includes museum admission), 200 Central Park West; AMNH.org

SOUL BROTHERS

Martin Luther King Jr. weekend is a wonderful time to celebrate the ties that bind us. One of those natural alliances is between the African-American and Jewish people, who memorably teamed during the Civil Rights era to fight segregation and bigotry. That partnership is recalled in "Soul to Soul," a high-octane concert by the National Yiddish Theatre Folksblende and IMPACT Repertory Theatre. You'll hear songs in English and in Yiddish, with English subtitles.

$35 and up. Sunday at 2 p.m., the Museum of Jewish Heritage, 36 Battery Place; NYT.org

TOUCH AND GO

Children 3 to 10 can get up close and personal with design at a bold new museum exhibit created just for them. "Inside Art" encourages kids to peek into, crawl on and generally enjoy large-scale installations and sculptures by 11 contemporary artists. Among the highlights: a giant tabletop puzzle on which to decode shapes and patterns, and a sculpture that invites kids to move and live like a groundhog. And it's not even Groundhog Day!

$15. Children's Museum of Manhattan, 212 W. 83rd St.; CMAA.org

New York Post, Saturday, January 18, 2020

nypost.com