The best things to do with kids in NYC this week

We found the best things to do with kids in NYC this week: a cool combo of virtual and in-person happenings

Danielle Valente

While Santa gets ready for his North Pole departure, the best things to do with kids in NYC this week all focus on Christmas.

Holiday markets, Christmas movie marathons, drive-thru light shows are all slated for the next few days before the holiday. (If you need last-minute gift suggestions, we’ve got you.)

We know things don’t necessarily look the way they normally do. However you’re celebrating this year, know that we’re thinking of you and wishing you a happy, healthy season and all good things for 2021.
24. “Right to Vote”

Museums Childhood Children’s Museum of Manhattan, Upper West Side Until Jan 28 2021

The Children’s Museum of Manhattan new “Right to Vote” exhibit commemorates the centennial of women’s suffrage and, of course, the 2020 election. It intends to emphasize the importance of working for the greater good, listening to others’ opinions and thoughtful decision making. Upon visiting the installation, little politicians in the making will cast a vote to a subject near and dear to their heart—free school meals, clean water or more park spaces. After testing out what voting feels like, kids step into the role of commander in chief in the mini Oval Office, where they can take calls and make deals. Subsequently, they’ll learn about important figures in the women’s suffrage movement and use the pioneers’ example to create artwork to represent what’s important to them. (Think DIY posters, ballots, etc.) Ages 2 and up.
